This is a unique opportunity to work with Jamie Bennett, whose drawings, paintings and enameled pieces are exhibited, featured in various publications and collected internationally. Professor Bennett is the head of the metals department at the State University of New York in New Paltz. He has traveled widely to draw inspiration from traditional non-western ornamentation. This workshop will explore various methods and processes in the Limoges technique of enameling. Painting enameling is a process where the finely ground enamel or overglaze is applied by brush or pen to the prepared enamel surface. Each student will work on an enamel element or panel using this technique. The use of various oils and binders will also be discussed. If you have ever wanted to capture your images and drawings in glass on metal this is your chance to learn from a leading artist
